It will probably be the same old story—the Democrats will back down.

Senator Conkling has the power to do the Republican party much mischief, and he seems proud of this power.

Good news has been heard from one man. P. T. Barnum called on the President yesterday, and said he didn't want an office.

It would be hard to decide which would be preferable to the Republican party, Gorham or defeat. Between the two evils, it is hard to tell which is the least.

The Madison Republicans seemed to have slept on election day, and allow the Democrats to take all the offices. The Republicans of Madison are a little too generous.

Those who are dead-set against the anti-treating law may find a crumb of comfort in the fact that Attorney-General Wilson believes the law does not include malt liquors.

Thomas M. Nichol, wants to live among the orange groves of the South, and if the government must support him, he may as well be sent there and get a first class living and a good salary.

If Voorhees would only fight Mahone, the Republicans would have a clear majority; the officers would be elected, business would go on smoothly, and Voorhees would not be missed.

Senator Bayard, who has spasmodic attacks of independence, and once in a while gets on a lofty plane of statesmanship, generally backs down in time to vote with his party on the most unjust and partisan questions.

There is a house, it is said, on the boundary line between Hartford and Windsor, Connecticut, which was built fifty-five years ago. It has been inhabited ever since that time, some times by a dozen person at once, and in all the fifty-five years there has not been a death in the house.

One would suppose that ex-President Hayes having had an acceptable administration and retiring with the confidence of the public, that he would not so far forget himself as to become a writer of a book; and yet we are told that he proposes to write the history of his administration.

The law changing the management of the State institutions went into effect on the 7th, the bill having been published on that day. There are numerous applicants for the places on the board of control, and the Governor will have no little trouble in deciding who shall be placed thereon.

Postmaster-General James starts in well so far as economy is concerned. During the first month of his administration he saved nearly a quarter of a million of dollars by cutting down expenses. A new broom sweeps clean, but the Postmaster General's friends say he will keep up the economy to the end.

The artist who will be employed to paint a portrait of the late Senator Carpenter, for the State, is Mr. McEntee. For some time he has been engaged in preparing illustrations for the Harper publications, and is said to be a fine artist. We suppose, however, that he is better at crayon work than at oil painting.

A dispatch from Madison says the general belief in that city is that an extra session of the Legislature to pass a new apportionment bill is not necessary. The opinion is the old apportionment holds good until a new one is made, and that the election of the Legislature under the apportionment of 1876 will be constitutional.

President Garfield seems to have some of the Jacksonian backbone. A rumor is afloat that Conkling will compromise with the President if the latter will withdraw the nomination of Judge Robertson, and give the New York collectorship to some one else outside the State of New York. The President refuses to enter into any such arrangement.

A little pamphlet, without a title page and having 120 leaves, was sold in New York this week at auction for $525. It was the famous copy of Rikel's "Mexico 1544," and at one time was the property of the Emperor Maximilian. It is said to be the second book ever printed on this continent. The government wanted the book, and sent an agent thither to bid as high as $500, but Mr. Sablin, an accomplished bibliographer, bid $525 and got it. He would have paid $800 for it had it been necessary.

A gentleman who has traveled pretty extensively through Colorado, writes to the Cincinnati Times in regard to the destruction of cattle between Dodge City to Las Animas, in that State. According to his statement, the distance is 175 miles, and the entire region is a cattle graveyard. Thousands upon thousands of carcasses lie within sight of the railroad, and thousands of emaciated creatures, so feeble that they can scarcely stand, and are unable to rise if they fall down, litter about in a vain effort to find food. At Lakin, a station midway between Dodge City and Las Animas, the people estimate that at least 45,000 cattle were crowded in and around the town during the prevalence of the severe storm a few weeks ago. If these statements make any approach to accuracy, not only must the loss be enormous, but there would seem to be no little danger of a pestilence from the decaying carcasses.

There were eighteen mayors elected in Wisconsin on the 5th, whose names are as follows:

Conklin, Democrat, Madison.
Stringham, Democrat, Oshkosh.
Lorvejoy, Republican, Janesville.
Stanley, Republican, Republican, Chippewa Falls.
Turner, Republican, Portage.
Farr, Democrat, Eau Claire.
Schnette, Republican, Manitowish.
Packard, Independent, Racine.
Smiley, Republican, La Crosse.
Williams, Democrat, Kenosha.
Weber, Democrat, Watertown.
Harwood, Republican, Ripon.
Abrams, Independent, Green Bay.
Gray, Democrat, Fort Howard.
Leahy, Independent, Wausau.
Garvey, Democrat, Prairie du Chien.
Johnson, Republican, Stevens Point.
Pierce, Democrat, Appleton.

There are seven Republicans, eight Democrats, and three Independents. By local quarrels which were entirely unnecessary, the Republicans gave away three or four mayors to the Democrats.

There has been an enormous and humiliating scramble for office in all the departments at Washington, and happily for him, Secretary Kirkwood has passed the most perplexing point, having made all the appointments to the new positions in the pension office created by the last Congress. The pressure for these places has been remarkable heavy, and the experience of the Secretary at the very outset of his administration in submitting to the solicitations of members of Congress and others in influence in behalf of friends and dependants has been very trying. Of the twenty new examiners at $2,000 each, twelve were selected from among the experienced clerks of the pension office, and eight were chosen from those most highly recommended among the new applicants; of the $1,800 list, five were promotions and fifteen were new appointments; of the $1,600 list, twelve were promotions and eight were new appointments. One clerk was promoted to the $1,400 list and nineteen new appointments were made. All the $1,200 positions were filled with new men.

THE PRESENT SESSION OF THE SENATE.

There is a strange contest going on in the United States Senate over the question as to who shall be officers of the Senate. This is the cause of the continued session of the Senate from day to day, and the reason why the confirmations have been delayed. At present, Democrats fill the offices in the Senate. There is a tie in the Senate, each party having 38 votes, with Mahone voting with the Republicans and Davis with the Democrats. The Republicans elected their committees by the Vice President casting the deciding vote. But in the election of officers the Republicans are not so pleasantly situated, and while the Democrats can not elect their candidates they can prevent the Republicans from electing theirs. If the Democrats were to vote for one set of officers and thus make the vote a tie, as in the case of the organization of the committees, the Vice President could cast his vote which would give the tie to the Republicans a majority of one, and the trouble would be over with. And since the Democrats can not elect their friends to office, they propose to play the mischief with the Republican programme by dividing their vote, some voting for one man and some for another, and in this way break a tie and thus prevent the Vice President from casting the deciding vote.

The reasons that led to this stubbornness on the part of the Democrats, is the course of Senator Mahone, of Virginia, who is a Democrat in principle and an ex-Confederate general, but who was elected Senator by the votes of the Republicans and the Readjusters. Being under no obligations to the Democrats, he decided to cast his vote with the Republicans. There was a sort of an arrangement entered into that Mr. Riddleberger another independent Democrat of the Mahone school, should be the Republican Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate. In fact he was Senator Mahone's warm friend, and it was understood that in consideration of Mahone voting with the Republicans the latter were to reciprocate by voting for Riddleberger. This arrangement raised the ire of the Democrats who now seek every means to defeat the election of the Republican officers. One party or the other will be compelled to give way or the session will continue all summer. It is said there are four Republicans in the Senate who are willing to throw Mahone for the time being and go into executive business, and these are Hale and Frye, of Maine, Blair, of New Hampshire, and Ingalls, of Kansas. It is even said that the President and Secretary Blaine are of the opinion that this course would be best. But to desert Mahone now would be to lose him hereafter, and hence there is a disposition on the part of the Republicans to stand by Mahone and the Republican majority independent of the length of time the session will be continued. Senator Sherman, a man possessed of a well-balanced mind, and who is a careful thinker and an able statesman, is willing to fight the battle for Mahone regardless of the time it will require to make the Democrats surrender.

This is the position of the two parties briefly and plainly stated. The arrangement with Mahone was perfectly proper, and it is right that the Republicans should stand by him. If there is a delay in transacting public business, the Democratic minority, through its filibustering, is alone responsible.

THAT'S THE QUESTION.

How Long Will the Deadlock Continue.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Letters are received from newspaper editors and others asking in all seriousness how long the senatorial deadlock will last. If the seven wisest men on earth were examined under oath they could tell nothing about it. The Senate probabilities just now are far more difficult to discover than the weather probabilities. The opinions of the people, including Senators, are as variable as the wind. Senators Allison said to-day that there was no prospect of an early adjournment, and he had come to the conclusion that the Senate would remain in session all summer. This is on the supposition that neither side will back down. As every Senator upon both sides says that they will not back down if the session holds till December, it can be seen what there is to base a guess upon. In private there is less talk about holding on till December, but more inquiry as to a way out of the difficulty. No way presents itself except a square back down, which will be a very disagreeable proceeding when it comes.

A GIGANTIC SCHEME.

How the Plan of an Air Line from New York to Chicago Looks on Paper.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 7.—There is said to be a great scheme afoot to build an air line from New York to Chicago, crossing Pennsylvania on the forty-first degree and opening up untold mineral wealth. It is said to be backed by English capital and the plan on the paper calls for a bridge 300 feet above the Allegheny river, the highest in the country. A supposed "letter of instruction" to engineers orders them to "avoid all curves and gradients." Such a road, it is stated, would be 180 miles shorter than any other roads and would bring Chicago fourteen hours nearer to New York. To reduce the time that number of hours it would be necessary to reduce the distance 500 miles. The officers of the Pennsylvania railroad company say the whole scheme is as ridiculous as a railroad to the moon, and has nothing whatever in it.

CARPENTER'S REMAINS.

MILWAUKEE, April 7.—At 4:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, the committee appointed to meet the Carpenter cortege at Chicago will depart for that city over the St. Paul road. Governor Smith will deliver an address when the remains are turned over to the Wisconsin delegation at the depot, and there will doubtless be responses. The remains will reach this city at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, lie in state at the county court house until Sunday afternoon under a military guard of honor, and at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon all that remains of the gifted Matt H. Carpenter will be placed at rest in Forest Home cemetery. Mrs. Carpenter and her daughter and son will reside hereafter in the old family home in this city.

THE DEUEL STARVATION.

IOWA CITY, April 7.—Hattie Denell is yet alive, after forty-three days of self-inflicted starvation. She is reported this evening by Dr. Alyworth about as usual except weaker. She had a very bad sinking spell this morning, and her death was considered imminent for several hours. She, however, slowly rallied, and now lies in a quiet, unconscious and languid condition, with staring open eyes and fluttering pulse, ranging from normal to 120, and spasmodic breathing. Her sisters think her very low, and say she looks worse, if possible, than ever before. Threats of legal interference have not been verified during the day, and it is not now probable anything will be done. Dr. Alyworth has as yet made no reply to the card of the medical society published last night.

THE EXTRA SESSION.

The Opinions of Governor Smith and Ex-Chief Justice Dixon on the Question of an Extra Session of the Legislature.

MILWAUKEE, April 8.—The Sentinel publishes interviews with the leading lawyers on the failure of the apportionment bill, and being interviewed, Governor Smith said that no difficulty would result from the failure of the Legislature to make the apportionment. The same occurrence was mentioned as having eventuated during the session of the Legislature in the year 1851. The succeeding Legislature of 1852 went on and made the apportionment, as it directly empowered to do so by the constitution. The Governor appeared to be thoroughly satisfied that there would be no trouble and seemed to think that the Legislature could next year make an apportionment.

Ex-Chief Justice Dixon said he had not looked up the question and would not like to express an opinion until he had studied the matter. He knew only what he had seen in the newspapers, nothing further. However, he looked up the opinion which Judge Payne had written on a case which involved a question very similar to the one now being discussed. After reading the remarks spoken of, Judge Dixon said it was apparent that the Legislature could make no apportionment except at the session immediately succeeding an enumeration of the population by either the State or United States authorities. Should they fail in their duty the dereliction cannot be remedied. The next Legislature must be elected under the old apportionment and the matter allowed to pass until another opportunity is presented as constitutional is provided. It was suggested by the Judge though, that if the Legislature neglected their duty, there was no power which could compel them to do as they should. The result of the legislative tactics would be that the old apportionment would remain for five years, and the next Legislature would be elected under it, or the State government would be dissolved.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

MADISON, April 7.—The meeting of Madison ladies for the purpose of forming a State suffrage association was held this afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Bascom, wife of the President of the State University. Many of the leading ladies of this city were present. A constitution and by-laws was reported and adopted, and the name declared to be the "Woman's Equal Suffrage Association of Wisconsin." The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. E. Irish; recording secretary, Alice E. Craig; corresponding secretaries, Mrs. Blanche Delaplaine, Ella A. Giles, and Mrs. J. M. Oliver; treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Dinsley. The intention is to make a vigorous campaign in behalf of female suffrage in the coming elections. The society thus formed will be the head center of the movement, with branches to be established in all parts of the State.

THE EARTHQUAKE AT SCIO.

LONDON, April 7.—The Greek Patriarch at Constantinople telegraphs the Greek committee in Liverpool as follows: "The news from Scio is heartrending. The catastrophe surpasses all belief. I implore you to form committees to receive subscriptions in aid of the sufferers. The need is urgent." The Lord Mayor of London has opened subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers. Nearly £10,000 have been raised. Shocks of earthquake in Scio are fast completing the general ruin. In Kastro, which contained nearly 4,000 inhabitants, only 150 are known to be alive.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

MANITOWOC, Wis., April 7.—A young man named Fred Lears, while endeavoring to get his own team out of the way of a runaway here this morning, was himself run into and killed instantly, the pole of the wagon striking him in the back of the head and splitting it open. Young Lears was a farmer living in the town of Manitowoc, about three miles from here.

HAYES' EXPENSES.

On What Did He Spend $33,500 a Year.

Washington Republic.
Mr. Hayes, since his return to Ohio, had himself interviewed by the Cleveland Herald with reference to the disposition of his income as President. He sets down his four year's expenses at $300,000, and he says he paid $4,000 for the expenses of the "visiting statesmen" to Louisiana, which would leave $296,000 of the $300,000 received by him as salary. Mr. Hayes, so he says, owed $90,000 when he entered upon the duties of his office "mostly on account" of bequests charged on the Burchard estate; he paid $60,000 of these debts out of his salary, and has $6,000 as evidence of his four years' presidency. It would thus appear that Mr. Hayes has $30,000 in debts staring him in the face. On his way to Fremont he said he would take up his residence again in that town "not only on account of the pleasant associations of that place, but because he could not afford to keep up the style of living which would be expected of an ex-president in a large city." When Mr. Hayes became President he was regarded as a wealthy man, not only by the public at large, but by the people of Ohio, who were familiar with his circumstances. The question naturally comes up what has become of his money? I venture to say that there is not a single public man nor an intelligent citizen of Washington who has not noted the economies of the White House who will believe that Mr. Hayes' expenses while president were $33,500 a year. We all know, for the Hayes family have boastfully proclaimed the fact from the gilded parlors of the executive mansion to the cattle-shows of the Pacific coast, that wine had no place in the White House purchases. Thus the biggest source of outlay in all previous presidential housekeeping was avoided. It is almost equally well known that the President did not have to pay for fuel, gas, house rent, furniture, vegetables, or flowers, and that, with two or three exceptions, the servants were paid by the government. He bought the most of his meat and groceries at cost prices from the army commissary, and it is a matter of record that he drew his salary a month in advance, and thus made interest on his monthly allowance. Mr. Hayes, so far as diligent inquiry can ascertain, never gave anything toward the campaign expenses of the Republican party—although he did allow the assessment of the clerks while pretending to oppose it—when the poor of Washington were freezing and starving, and when foreign ministers bountifully assisted to stay the general suffering, the late occupants of the white house, so far as the records show, gave out only a barrel of frozen apples to the children's hospital. In view of all these facts, will some domestic economist kindly explain how Mr. Hayes could have got rid of $33,500 a year as the legitimate expenses of the white house? It must not be forgotten that Mr. Hayes was a good man in all his walks. He had none of the vices of the ordinary man. His enjoyments were all in the home circle. He did not go to the theatre nor to the opera, he did not smoke; he was plain in dress; he drank liquor and wine only at other people's expense; he gave no prizes to public schools; he did not drive fast horses, he did not gamble; he did not buy books and works of art; and there were no female scandals connected with his administration. Then what did he do with all his money? Nobody in Washington can figure up an actual expenditure of even $10,000 a year. From the present outlook the American people will soon be called upon to help another ex-president out of his poverty.

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

"LOVE IN A SWING."

I was born a beauty; from the time I could talk and understand it was instilled into me as a fact. When I could toddle about, some judicious person, probably a nurse, gave me the name of "Beauty," and it stuck to me ever after. I don't think I was inordinately proud of my distinction, although even in childhood it makes a difference, but it seems to me as I look back that my attractions were made use of by my brothers and sisters for their own benefit. They were always sending me to beg a holiday on the plea that "Papa won't refuse Beauty," or later on, to get leave to go to this or that place of amusement, for Mamma is sure to let Beauty have her way.

It's a wonder I wasn't quite spoiled, but I don't think I was; at least no such accusation was ever made, even when sisterly civilities were being interchanged. We were a large family, principally girls, all presentable except my eldest sister, Matilda; she had no looks to speak about, but she made it up by a superabundance of brains—a sort of plateau to be relied upon on all state occasions. She certainly was a remarkable woman; her one idea was to push one's self forward in life—an English adaptation of "Aide-toi, et le Ciel t'aidera." (Help yourself and Heaven will help you.)

How angry she was when I married Charley! She was at Gibraltar settling my brother Edmund in his appointment, and I was Mrs. Redcar, before she came back. Charley was a Captain with good prospects of getting on, but Matilda made him sell out and put his money into a new company started to provide Venice with tram cars; after this we came up to town, because Matilda said that with my beauty and Charley's connections London was the place for us. We were sure to push our way; but seriously enough, we didn't. Charley's connections belonged to the Plymouth Brothers and Sisters, and my good looks were quite thrown away on people who were poke bonnets. There was one old man, a grand-uncle of Charley's, who had lived in the Regency days, and said I was the image of Dolly Bloomfield, whoever she might be.

A year or so passed very quietly, and then Matilda came up to see how we were getting on. She was very indignant when she found that we had made no way, and scolded us roundly for our supineness.

"I have no patience with either of you," she said. "With Beauty's looks and the Redcar connection you ought to be at the very top of the tree." And then we explained to her about the Plymouth Brethren.

"But there's Charley's godfather's wife; she has nothing to say to trade or meeting-houses, because I see her parties every other week in the Morning Post," said my sister, with a look which meant: "You can't impose on me; if Beauty were only seen there she'd soon push her way."

Charley looked at me and I looked at Charley, and then we both burst out laughing. It was a mortifying confession, but the truth was we had been at Charley's wife's godfather's—no, I mean Charley's godfather's wife—more than once, and nothing had come of my "being seen there" but the bills we had to pay for the dress I wore and the carriage.

Matilda looked very glum when we told her this. "I don't see what you are laughing at," she said, crossly. "No one but a fool would find amusement in their own failure." This was very severe, but Matilda was awfully put out, and in the evening, when Charley had gone to the wheel, she pushed me, she spoke very seriously to me.

"I don't like the look of things," she said. "I shouldn't be at all surprised if those Venetian tram shares don't come to much. The people there are so silly, they prefer the gondolas, and if they go down where will you be?"

"Good gracious! Matilda, I thought you recommended them, and said they would double our income."

"And haven't they done so, you silly thing! You have to do is to put your shoulder to the wheel, and push Charley, and that will make it all right. As for him, he is a regular stick in the mud. So you must do it yourself."

"I? Why what in the world can I do?"

"Make yourself the fashion!" said my sister, oracularly.

The next day Matilda, Charley and I went to see the pictures at the R. A. It's a long way from Inverness, Terns to Piccadilly, particularly on a hot day, so we went in an omnibus. But Matilda thinks it's a disgrace to be seen in one. She has a provincial idea that every one knows her. She sits far back with her veil drawn in a tight little ball over her nose, which makes her ever so much more remarkable. This day in particular she was in a great fright and was very indignant with Charley and me, who were laughing at the faces she made.

When she got out she said: "To think that our Beauty should be brought down to sit with washerwomen in an omnibus!"

Charley flushed up. He's the most good-humored fellow in the world; but he doesn't like Matilda. "She should drive in a coach with six horses, if I could give it to her," he said; "but she knew I was a poor man when she took me."

"And liked you all the better," cried I gaily, as I pressed his arm affectionately; but Matilda only snorted. I heard her mutter: "A pair of fools!"

The Academy was very full that day, and I thought it a great bore. Neither Charley nor I care much for pictures, but Matilda says she understands "color." She goes round religiously with her catalogue and pencil and marks the good ones. She leaves it on the drawing-room table when she goes home, and holds forth to the company upon the "decadence" of Millais, and the "deep impasto" of Burne Jones.

I soon got tired, so I sat down near the passage leading to the refreshment room. I always think the lunch is about the best thing at the pictures. But they seemed never to be coming. For some time I amused myself looking at the people; they were a shifting mass of faces and dresses, and I was greatly diverted. By and by I began to observe that the crowd when they came to a certain picture stood there, forming a regular line, as they did for Miss Thompson. It was awfully hot, and I had taken off my veil and pushed up my hat, for my forehead was burning. Suddenly I noticed that a great many people turned their backs upon the picture, and looked at me, and then faced round again to the canvass wall.

In my character of Beauty I have been the sort of homage conveyed by what is called "hard staring," so that it must have been an undue amount of it which attracted my attention; but surely I had never seen any like this. Groups of two, three, six at a time would stand before me, calmly surveying me, and I could gather by their gestures, talking of me. But I didn't hear what they said. I became very anxious to see the picture which attracted such attention, but the black round it was too great. The next best thing was to ask for information. It was some time before I could pitch upon a person who seemed fitting for this purpose. At last a very quiet-looking lady came near me. She had a catalogue in her hand. I addressed her. "May I ask you to tell me the name of the picture at which every one is looking?" She turned to the book, but first glanced at me; then hurried on, and I saw her a few minutes afterward pointing me out to some of her friends. I felt extremely uncomfortable. I looked about anxiously for Charley and Matilda, but there was no sign of either. Then I did a very foolish thing; I got up to go and look for them, principally to escape from the numberless eyes fixed upon me.

To my surprise the crowd made way as one, and as I walked, followed me, pressing very closely upon me, but not discourteously. I could hear some of the remarks, which were of the most flattering description. Just then I saw in the distance a brother officer of Charley's, a certain Captain Winton. He was a hanger-on and toady of the great, and a most conceited, tiresome little creature. I disliked him, although I'm bound to say he never absolutely cut us.

He now stopped to speak to me; of course, he was politely indifferent as to the loss of my party.

"I would help you to look for Charley," he said; "but the fact is the Duchess of Cranberry is here, and she's quite on the qui vive. Some one has told her that the original of the picture is actually in the room, and, of course, it would be everything to secure her for the 20th, and—"

Here I interrupted him rather rudely, but he was a bit of a bore.

"I wonder," I said—but here I was in my turn interrupted. Two gentlemen on one side, two on the other, tapped Captain Winton on each shoulder.

"Will you kindly introduce me?" said one.

"And me?" said the other.

"And me?" said the third.

Little Winton stared, but did as he was bid.

"Lord Snappington—Mrs. Redcar; Colonel Fotheringham—Mrs. Redcar; Sir John De Tabley—Mrs. Redcar; Major Beaulieu—Mrs. Redcar. Beaulieu, I think you know Charley Redcar; he was one of ours?"

In right of this acquaintance, Major Beaulieu walked on my right hand; Lord Snappington fought hard to keep his place on my left; but the crowd, which persistently followed in my wake, would not let him. Hardly any conversation was possible. At the first convenient pause, little Winton darted forward:

"My dear Mrs. Redcar, how silly you have been! And Charley, too, never breathed a word of this! Now, you must come at once to the Duchess; I have her positive orders." And, before I could take in what he meant, I was being introduced to a very large lady, with a high nose and a most charming manner.

"I am so pleased to know you, Mrs. Redcar," she said. "I am obliged to hurry away; but you will come to me on the 20th, won't you? I haven't time to say half the pretty things I ought; but really, without flattery, it isn't equal. There, now, I'll not say another word. Stay; could you come to me this evening? It's so shocking to know that you don't look formal. Eh? What?"

In answer to a whisper from little Winton—"Of course, Captain Redcar, by all means—that is, if he will give me the pleasure. I have to run away—so sorry. My carriage, Captain Winton, if you please. Good-by. And, with a pretty smile and a bow, she vanished.

It was all so sudden I felt quite stupid. I don't understand it, I said. "I don't know her, or what she wants with me."

"That's the Duchess of Cranberry. She's a great friend of Masse's, and her wonderful party is to be on the 20th."

"But what does she want with me?" I repeated.

They all smiled, and Winton, who had just come back, said "Capital!" He volunteered to go and look for Charley, and suggested to one of the gentlemen to see about my carriage.

"The Duke is delighted," he said, "and thanked me so much for the introduction. No wonder, it makes the whole thing complete. Didn't I do well about Charley? It wouldn't do at all for him to be in the background. But, listen, I have a hint for your private ear. I shouldn't be at all surprised if a certain Person is there this evening."

"Where?"

"Oh! at the Duchess's, of course. I just give you the hint. Throw over my engagement, do you hear? And mind you bring Charley." And with a grave face he went.

For a minute or two I felt inclined to cry. "Oh! I had no luncheon, and this extraordinary adventure puzzled me. I looked round at my escort of four gentlemen. 'I should like to go home,' I said.

Lord Snappington immediately offered me his arm. Major Beaulieu brought my parasol—the other two ran for my carriage. "I haven't any, indeed," I went on; "I think you take me for some one else."

At this they all laughed, and Lord Snappington said would I honor him by making use of his? He didn't want it for the rest of the afternoon, if I liked to drive. He was so pressing that I really couldn't refuse to go to Inverness Terrace in it, although I hardly expected the wonderful footman to know where it was.

I declare when I found myself in the carriage quite alone I rubbed my eyes and pinched my fingers. I could hardly help thinking that I had fallen asleep and had dreamt all this, but just as I was pinching myself hard I saw Charley and Matilda standing on the pavement in Piccadilly, looking very hot and uncomfortable. I put my head out of the window and called to the grand coachman to stop.

The man looked at me very wickedly, but I didn't care. I jumped out, and never felt more pleased than when I got hold of Charley's arm and the line carriage had driven away empty.

Anything like the amazement of Charley and Matilda, when they heard my adventure, I never saw. They couldn't make head nor tail of it any more than myself; only one thing was clear to me, that I must get home as fast as I could. I was so faint with excitement and hunger. We all made up our minds that it was a mistake of some kind. We went carefully through the catalogue, but there was nothing there. Charley proposed running into Mrs. Smithers at No. 10 (she sets up to be artistic) but Matilda said no—not on any account—the thing was to keep our own counsel. Matilda was all for our going to the Duchess's. She said it didn't matter, mistake or no mistake. She had asked me to her house in my own proper person and under my own proper name, and there was no imposition or forcing myself in on my side. Charley said the same, and added that at all events it would be fun—so we went.

Charley burst out laughing in the carriage—he said his godfather's wife would get a fit when she heard that we had been to Cranberry House. But I think he got nervous when we were actually inside. I know I felt ready to sink into the earth when we walked up the grand staircase through lines of powdered footmen. It seemed to me I was utterly absurd. The first person I saw was Lord Snappington near the door. He seemed like an old friend; and presently Colonel Beaulieu joined us. He seemed to know Charley very well, although Charley says they haven't done more than nod these ten years; but he was very friendly, and asked us to drive down to his coach to the Orleans next day. I was very pleased, for Charley had been wishing to go and—so had I.

After a time little Winton came up in a great fuss, and said the Duchess was asking for me, and that I was to go into the boudoir. I didn't, of course, know where that was, but Lord Snappington gave me his arm and said he would take me there. As we walked along, I heard a great many people whispering together: "There she is, on Lord Snappington's arm. I was trying to know what it all meant, and I would have asked Lord Snappington then and there, only that Matilda's last words had been: 'Mind you ask no questions. Just take everything as it comes.' Still I think I would have said something, but just then we got into the boudoir, and there was the same lady I had seen in the morning, only looking much grander, and with the most lovely diamonds on her head. She had about twenty other ladies and gentlemen with her, and she was talking to a Personage whom I recognized at once, and my knees knocked together with fright.

"Oh! here is Mrs. Redcar," cried the Duchess; "now we have her we shall be all right."

That certain Person put a glass in his eye and looked at me:

"Fond of swinging, Mrs. Redcar?" much in that manner Charley would have said it. And then every one began to laugh. I laughed, too, although I had no idea why.

"Do you swing much?" the Personage went on, still surveying me through the glass, earnestly.

I hadn't swung since I was a child, and I thought it a very odd question; but, before I had time to answer, the Duchess struck me.

"My swinging-party comes off on the 20th, and I have given directions to have a rose-colored swing put up for Mrs. Redcar."

There was a general chorus of approbation, and I really began to think I had got among a set of lunatics. Just then some music began in the next room, and there was a move toward it. The certain Person lingered a moment.

"Duchess! I shall certainly come to your swinging party on the 20th for the pleasure of seeing Mrs. Redcar in the rose-colored swing." He smiled pleasantly at me as he spoke, did this Great Man, and strolled lazily out of the boudoir.

When he was gone every one crowded round me. I'm sure I made twenty acquaintances and had twenty invitations in as many minutes.

All the rest of the evening was one whirl of pleasure. Charley enjoyed it quite as much as I did, and we both agreed that after all good company is nicer than and quite as cheap as any other.

In the middle of the night Charley awoke me by another loud fit of laughter. "I can't help it, Beauty," he said, "but I can't get over godfather's wife when she hears of our being on easy terms with the best in the land."

It was most surprising. There was certainly no doubt on that point.

The next morning we had just done breakfast when, to our surprise, Charley's godfather's wife drove up. Matilda had just time to give us a word of caution when she came in, all laces and ribbons, bangles and chains—so unlike the Duchess. She made straight at me.

"My dear," she said, and kissed me on both cheeks; "how silly of you," and then she kissed me again.

Just then there came another knock at the door, and one of Charley's uncles (a very great manufacturer, with works at the East End) was announced. He was a good man, and I liked him, but his face was extra long this morning. He took Charley and me aside:

"This is true," he said, and he thrust a copy of the White Star into my hand, pointing to this paragraph:

"I am glad to tell my readers that the charming original of Monsieur Henri Masse's famous picture of 'Love in a Swing' is among us. She is not a Frenchwoman, but English born and bred—Mrs. Redcar, wife of Captain Charles Redcar, late of the Tenth Regiment; and we may well be proud of our lovely countrywoman. This puts an end to the countless stories which have been floating about since the picture appeared. It is to the Duchess of Cranberry (Monsieur Masse's old friend) that we owe this addition to the ranks of the Beauties. Mrs. Redcar appears under the Duchess's wing. She made her debut at the Cranberry House soiree last night, and was hugely admired."

So much for the truth of report. After all, then, there was no harm in it, and although at first I didn't like sailing under false colors, still Matilda persuaded me it would be foolish to make a fuss; I had only to hold my tongue and let the fashionable world and the fashionable newspapers tell as many lies as they pleased. I did so. I became the fashion. After the Duchess's swinging party on the 20th of June, 1879, my position was assured. No one can be more fashionable than I am. Under Matilda's directions I am trying hard to push Charley on. If I succeed I will tell you all about it.—Whitehall Review.

Discipline in the French Army.

It would be interesting to get exact statistics as to the number of men shot on the French side during the war, together with details of their offenses. Unfortunately the War Office can not, or will not, give any information on this head. Possibly no record has been kept of these executions; but this much is certain, that every officer who served through the war is ready with stories of how summarily certain Generals went to work to establish order among their troops. General Clinchant, the present Military Governor of Paris, was terribly strict, but popular all the same; for he was known to be just, and kind, too, when he could afford to be so. Having the command of raw levies, inclined to be insubordinate, he resolved to show them promptly that he was their master. Once he issued a stringent order against robbing fruit and vegetables from the fields and gardens of the peasants in the Loire Valley. A few days afterward a couple of peasants stole out of camp by night and feathered a basketful of potatoes. These two soldiers happened to be veterans who had served in the Italian war, and they were brave fellows, much liked by their Colonel; but this only made their offense worse in the General's eyes; "for," said he, "if old soldiers set the example of disobedience, how can we expect the young ones to obey?" So the two young ones were shot. (m22d4w)

On another occasion three young soldiers took it into their heads to go out of camp without leave on a Sunday, in order to dine with some friends who lived in the neighborhood. They returned in time for tattoo, thinking probably they had committed only a venial offense. They were shot the next morning. One more example will show what stern justice has to be meted out where flogging is not available. General Clinchant had issued orders that on the march no soldier was to climb into the ambulances or transport wagons unless certified lame or ill by the army surgeons. The reason of this order was that a number of lazy soldiers used always to swarm on to the wagons in order to get a lift instead of marching. One day a youngster who was in perfect health clambered inside a van, and was discovered there by a Sergeant, who ordered him to get out. The soldier alighted, but, determined to have his drive, he sat upon his foot and inflicted a slight cut on his foot to make believe that he had gone lame. A Corporal saw him, and by-and-by the lad was reported for the double offense of disobedience and malingering. When he had been court-martialed, the General gave him a chance of his life by calling upon him to confess that the injury to his foot was self-inflicted; but the foolish fellow, thinking to save himself by a lie, maintained stoutly that he had gone lame by stepping on a flint. He was accordingly handed over to the Provost-Marshal and shot. - St. James' Gazette. (m22d4w)

A Town on Ice—The Fishing Camp on Saginaw Bay.

It is a well-known aphorism that one-half of the world does not know how the other half lives. Narrowing this down to a local significance it may be truthfully remarked that one-half of Michigan—the southern—does not know how the other half—the northern—lives. Keenly feeling the paucity of knowledge on this point, a large portion of our commonwealth, a representative of the News resolved the House into a Committee of One, and, like "Dr. Syntax in search of the picturesque," resolved to go forth and investigate the much-talked-of fishing town on Saginaw Bay, believing it to be nearly time for the annual item with startling display head of "a number of fishermen drifted out to sea and lost!" to appear. Being thus empowered to "send for persons and papers," the Committee of One proceeded to business. (m22d4w)

Three large villages forming the suburbs of Bay City are largely sustained by this industry—viz.: Banks, Bangor and Essexville. A number of fishermen also live at West Bay City as well as in the city proper. At this season of the year especially do these places present a scene of activity, as this is the season in which the fishing is most extensively conducted. The fishing grounds are situated about six miles from the mouth of the river and ten from Bay City. A good road leads out in a north-northeast direction. The road, as far inland as the eye can reach, is black with teams hauling supplies to the fisheries and bringing back the fish to Bay City. It is a scene of busy activity as we approach the fishing village, and everything seems to be on the trot. Dear reader, were you ever out fishing "when they bit good," and you were out of bait? Well, judging from the nervous activity displayed on every hand on the ice here, you would imagine everybody to be "out of bait." But here we are at last, in the principal street of this town, built upon the congested water six miles from safety, and within the grasp of death and danger at any moment. (m22d4w)

Viewed from a distance the ice town looks as though all the dog houses in Michigan had been gathered together for the purpose of forming a colony of Lilliputians. A few are of more pretentious size, these being the hotels and groceries. Don't laugh, dear reader; all these necessities are here found, and also well patronized, if one might judge from the number of customers present in each. A better idea can be formed of the city by taking one of the fishing boats as an illustration. These are about 6x8 in size on an average, some less, some more. They are built with the usual shanty roof, but have no floors. Instead of a floor the whole concern is mounted upon runners like a sled, and can be moved from place to place. Thus the topographical form of the city is constantly changing, as the fishermen frequently moves from place to place. Inside the shanty are berths for the men, usually three in number, like those in the forecabin of a vessel. A little stove and a platform and fish-box are all the furniture. Here the men are covered up for two or three months, eat, sleep, and fish. The fishing is effected generally as follows: A hole is cut in the ice about the center of the shanty. The men stand round it, two armed with light fish spears, the third with a line to which a herring is securely fastened. This he lets down in the water and then slowly draws it back to the surface, when it is followed by a number of voracious pickered trout. The two spearmen stand ready to impale the best, and as soon as ever the fish will follow the bait to the top of the water. Torches are used also by night, which adds much to the picturesque character of the surroundings. (m22d4w)

The present population is between three and four hundred, exclusive of the teamsters and provision dealers. Most of the work is done by companies, who hire the men at so much per day, but there are many single fishermen, or rather trios, who work the season through for themselves, and usually do well if the season is propitious like the present one. Last winter the bay fishing was a failure on account of the open water, but the present season promises to be one of the best for years. The principal fish caught are pickered, though perch and suckers are also caught; the season for trout is hardly opened properly yet. The possibility of the ice breaking up at almost any time is one feature of this work that is filled with danger. It may also part from the shore, and before the citizens on the ice know of the fact they may be drifted miles out to Lake Huron. Hardly a season passes that this does not take place, and the same storm from the south that sends the ice out into the lake will usually break it into small pieces, and then the danger is largely enhanced. Still, the poor fellows are usually rescued. The men are principally French and Indians who are engaged in this work, and the employment passes as a trade from father to son, from generation to generation. It is considered in "good form"—whatever that expression means—to pay a visit to the fishing town, it being one of the "lions" of Saginaw. The drive is a most marvellous one, all the distance from the East Saginaw to the town on the ice—and can be easily made in half a day. - Detroit News. (m22d4w)

"There Were Tears on His Cheeks."

"LORD bless you! but I had never given him a second look. I knew that he was a Norwegian, slow but solid, hardly able to speak a word of English, and I never cared whether he had a relative on earth. Perhaps it looks a bit hard-hearted in me, but I am driven from morning till night, and I must drive the men under me. When I want a hod-carrier I look for muscle, and when I have found muscle I don't look further for sentiment." (m22d4w)

"How did the accident happen?" "He stepped off the scaffold." "And is badly hurt?" "Yes, though I think he will pull through. Any man might have blundered as he did, but since I have learned how it was with him I've felt womanish in my heart." "How was it?" "Well, he had just got his hod filled with bricks, and down he went, when two or three of his countrymen came along and told him that his baby boy was dead. They had just come from his house on Russell street to bring him the news. He came up on the scaffold with his hod, probably intending to notify me of his affliction. His eyes must have been full of tears, and as he stepped out he missed his distance and went to the ground. There were tears on his cheeks when we picked him up, and the only word he uttered was 'my dead boy's name.' I had looked upon him only as an old Norwegian, but I found that he was a husband and father, a man with love and faith, a father who went home at night to coo with his baby and kiss the wife who had left all behind to follow him over the sea, and I tell you I feel like asking his forgiveness and doing all I can to soften the grief which has come upon his humble home." - Detroit Free Press. (m22d4w)

Liked His Prison.

PRISONS are built for the safety of society, but the persons who make the danger to society are not usually so ready as the poor Chinaman was to go to prison for the good of their fellow-men. The Carson (Nev.) Appeal says: A few days ago a Chinaman after serving a sentence of three years for an assault to kill. He was given twenty-five dollars and a new suit of clothes and directed to shift for himself. Day before yesterday the same man knocked at the gate, and when it was opened he thrust twenty-two dollars and a half into the keeper's hands for safe-keeping. It was almost dark, and he begged to be allowed to sleep in his old quarters over night. He was allowed to take up his abode in a woodshed, and the next morning when the roll was called, his number, thirty-nine, was skipped for obvious reasons. When forty was called a man sprang from the line dressed in prison garb and called out, "You no catched thirty-nine!" It was the discharged Chinaman. He had found his old striped clothes at the wash-house, and put them on. His civilian suit he had hidden away. He was told that he would have to go, but he begged to be kept, urging that his conduct had been so good that he ought not to be turned away. His logic was pretty strong. (m22d4w)

A Portuguese Pompeii.

M. MAGITOT, a member of the Prehistoric Congress which met at Lisbon last autumn, reports on a Portuguese Pompeii which he had occasion to inspect while on a tour to the territory of Tertiary Silice at Otta. The place is called Santarom and Citania. The latter is the general Portuguese name for ruins of ancient towns, which cover entire hills in the neighborhood of Braga. The most important of these very old town ruins is the Citania di Brateiros, which occupies nearly a kilometer square, and is supposed to be of Celtic origin. Circular walls, streets, squares, large architectural monuments, and even a number of houses have retained their typical forms. For twenty centuries this Citania was buried under debris, soil and a rich vegetation; only a few years ago a zealous archaeologist, Senor Sarmento, succeeded, by costly and troublesome efforts, in clearing away the covering of centuries and to lay open to the world an ancient city in which quite a primitive state of civilization is apparent. Its architecture and plastic ornamentation point to a somewhat advanced state of art and industry. Many of the stone monuments are covered with sculptures and inscriptions, which in their general character recall those of India and China, which the well-known Lyons archaeologist, M. Guimet, declares to be of a symbolic and religious character, similar to those found upon the Oriental monuments. It is possible that this fact might be adduced as a proof that the tribes who built these Citanias had originally emigrated from Turan. (m22d4w)

LITTLE WILLIE was in Vermont at his aunt's with his mamma on a summer visit. One day his aunt gave him a cake of maple-sugar. "It is not so good as when it was new," she said, "but you will take it, I'm sure." Willie wondered, as he nibbled the delicious morsel, how it ever could have been any better. The first time he and his mamma were alone he remarked, "Say, mamma, the next time we come here, let's come when the maple-sugar is ripe!" (m22d4w)

is highly recommended and unsurpassed for

WEAK or POUL KIDNEYS, DROPSY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE

LOSS OF ENERGY, NERVOUS DEBILITY, or any OB-

STRUCTIONS arising from KIDNEY or BLADDER DI-

SEASES. Also for Yellow Fever, Blood and Kidney Poisoning, in infected malarial sections.

It is the distillation of a FOREST LEAF with JUNIPER BERRIES and BARLEY

MALT we have discovered KIDNEYGEN, which acts specifically on the Kidneys and Urinary organs, removing impurities deposited in the bladder and preventing any straining, smarting sensation, heat or irritation in the membranes lining of the ducts or water passages. It excites a healthy action in the Kidneys giving them strength, vigor, and restoring these organs to a healthy condition, showing the effects on both the color and easy flow of urine. It can be taken at all times, in all climates and under all circumstances without injury to the system. Unlike any other preparation for Kidney difficulties it has a very pleasant and agreeable taste and flavor. It has been difficult to make a preparation containing positive diuretic properties which will not irritate, but be acceptable to the stomach. Before taking any Liver medicine try a bottle of

KIDNEYGEN to CLEANSE THE KIDNEYS from foul matter. Try it and you will always use it as a family medicine. Ladies especially will like it, and Gentlemen will find KIDNEY-

GEN the best Kidney Tonic ever used.

BRIEFLETS.

—The snow must go.

—The cold-water folk meet to-night.

—It is house-cleaning time at the Court house.

—The street gang of tramps, now being worked, numbers eight.

—The icicle season promises to be followed by the bicycle season.

—Justice Pritchard steps into Justice Brooks' office one week from next Tuesday.

—The next show booked for Janesville is that in which John Dillon appears on the 22d inst.

—The time draweth near, and is already at hand, when the women turn everything upside down, and call it house-cleaning.

—Mrs. E. A. Erwin, who has been spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Parker, at Dubuque, is visiting friends in this city.

—The telephone exchange is growing. A new telephone has been put up in the High school building this afternoon, and a new one in E. B. Hemmestre's residence.

—The new firm name of Frank Sherer & Co., now appears on a neat little sign placed over the entrance of the drug store, so long known as Croft & Sherer's.

—The cases of the boys, Benjamin Griffith and Frank Van Wart, of Porter, brought before Justice Brooks yesterday have been adjourned until next Tuesday.

—A little son of P. Morrison, of Beloit, aged only four years, while playing on the piazza at his home, Wednesday, suddenly dropped down and with one cry of "mamma," died. Heart disease is the supposed cause.

—Jim Snell, who is now serving a three years term in Waupun, will probably lose his claim upon the little woman, who clung to him so faithfully during his imprisonment and trial. She has commenced action for divorce.

—The accumulated dirt, straw and rubbish on Milwaukee street bridge has got dry enough to catch fire. A stub of a cigar set some of it smoking quite vigorously, to-day, but passers-by trampled it out, before it was fanned into a blaze.

—There are a number of the young men of the city who are thinking of buying bicycles. A meeting is to be held at Doe & Hyzer's office, this evening, at 7:30 o'clock, to consider the advisability of forming a club. All interested are invited to attend.

—A complaint is made about the condition of Court street just east of Main street. Gorge and filth are lying there, together with ice and slush, and the whole condition of affairs is such as to warrant the Board of Health in taking at least a look at it.

—Mrs. M. Caniff has returned from Chicago, where she has been getting a stock of millinery goods, and the goods themselves are arriving and being put in place. The display is a varied and attractive one, and the ladies will take delight in looking over and making their selections.

—The hopeful man met the grumbler, to-day, and had a chat about the weather. Said Hopeful: "Well, each day brings us one day nearer nice summer weather." Said Grumbler: "Yes, but it is also true that each day brings us one day nearer another winter." It makes a difference which way you look at it.

—Rock county has some old men of vigor. Mr. Doves who is over seventy years of age, yesterday walked seventeen miles into the city to buy him a suit of clothes of M. C. Smith & Son. Mr. Wiggins, aged 87 years, walks seven miles and back quite often. By the way, where has the young, hot blooded pedestrian gone to?

—The plasterers are at work in Myers' new block, and expect to get it ready for occupancy by May 1. Lawrence Atwood, & Lowell are to occupy the corner store, and have already placed there some farm machinery, which branch of the business they propose to push lively, having secured W. C. Stevens to pay special attention to that department.

—Newton Briggs, of Madison, is in the city representing the interests of the Northwestern Mutual Relief Association, of which he is General Manager. A. W. Baldwin, of this city, is one of the vice-presidents of the association. It was only organized in February last, and has for its purpose providing indemnity against loss of time by sickness or accident.

—There was an alarm of fire yesterday afternoon to which the engines did not respond. The alarm was not tapped on the bell, but was simply an "oh, my," screamed out by the driver of a wood wagon, who discovered that the lower-story of his coat was on fire. He sat down on and squelched it. The cause of the fire was a defective tube in his tobacco pipe, which he had carelessly placed in his pocket. Loss $3 cents. No insurance.

—Last night the Pemba house changed hands again, the Whitson brothers selling their interest to S. T. and A. R. Towle, both of whom are well known here, the latter having been in the livery business here, and the former having been extensively engaged in dealing in horses here and in Chicago. The new proprietors in taking possession find a house well fitted and well patronized, and will doubtless continue to keep it so. The Whitson brothers do not propose leaving Janesville, but will engage in buying and selling horses, keeping this city their headquarters.

—Mayor Cobb and Street Commissioner Croft have been trying an experiment on the tramp question. Two of the fraternity, whose time of service in the county jail had expired, expressed a willingness to go to work like honest men, and become self supporting. Accordingly the Mayor recommended that the Street Commissioner should hire them to work on the streets at ten shillings a day. The two started in bravely, and when the Street Commissioner was around worked well, but when his back was turned they would step into some saloon and fill up with some liquid inspiration. In this way they worked along for a day and a half when the experiment was declared a failure. Last night both were arrested and taken to jail again, where they will spend the usual time.

POOL'S ISLAND, N. F., Sept. 26th. DEAR SIR:—I have been watching the progress of your Electric Oil since its introduction to this place, and with much pleasure state that my anticipations of its success have been fully realized, it having cured me of Bronchitis and soreness of nose; while not a few of my "rheumatic neighbors"—one old lady in particular—pronounce it to be the best article of the kind that has ever been brought before the public. Your medicine does not require any longer a sponsor, but if you wish me to act as such, I shall be only too happy to have my name connected with your prosperous child. I am yours, JAMES CULLEN.

THE STABBING AFFRAY.

Harvey P. Main, charged with stabbing Patrick Collins, was again in the Police Court this afternoon. Collins himself was there too, having so far recovered as to be able to get around, though not by any means rugged yet. The District Attorney was absent, however, having been called unexpectedly to Evansville to attend a case there, and Main's attorney, Mr. Fethers, was absent in Monroe, attending the Ohms trial. Attorney Hendrix appeared in his stead, and an adjournment was arranged for one week.

WHEELLOCK'S WARES.

The Inter Ocean of yesterday in an extensive write up of South Bend, Ind., gives the crockery house of W. G. Wheellock & son quite an extended notice, from which we give the following.

No finer selection of goods in the various lines of their stock is offered in this market than are now on exhibition by Messrs. Wheellock & Son, at 59 Washington street. Some extent of their transactions may be conceived when we state that they occupy three floors at the above number, each 25x75 feet.

With this house we found the best and latest productions of Bohemian and Belgian markets (as they import direct), and nothing in the entire catalogue of these goods is wanting in their extensive stock.

There are larger jobbers of the staples in their line. This business was originally established in this city ten years ago, the present firm succeeding to the business in 1870. The senior member of this firm conducts a large business in this line at Janesville, Wis. The store at this place is under the able management of Mr. Charles E. Wheellock.

PROPOSALS.

Proposals will be received until Saturday, the 9th inst., 2 p. m., for the renting of the Rock County Fair Grounds, for one or more years. The Committee reserve the right to reject any and all bids. Per order of the Board.

Burnett's Cocaine for the Loss of Hair.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11, 1880.

Three years ago my hair was coming out very fast, and I was nearly bald. I was also troubled with dandruff. I began using BURNETT'S COCAINE, and my hair immediately stopped coming out, and has constantly been getting thicker. My head is now entirely free from dandruff. My wife has used the COCAINE with equally gratifying results.
